Dela protects you from application spyware that monitors your input activities. Dela works in two modes. On startup, the system checks to see if it's currently running in the (default) Full Mode. If not, Dela launches in Background Mode. In Full Mode, Dela runs silently in the background and continuously monitors your input activities. Dela changes the input language to your native one and captures what you type on the keyboard. Keystrokes are encrypted and are sent in-line to the web service. In Background Mode, Dela runs continuously in the background and monitors what you type on the keyboard. Dela does not capture any keystrokes in this mode. Instead, the system captures and encrypts what you type. These commands are sent to the Dela Server. Dela runs in the background without any user input. The application starts automatically when you boot the system. Both modes allow you to continue using your OS in a native language. Dela will also change your default keyboard layout and language to the native language of your OS. In Full Mode, Dela can capture: Taps Finger Swipes Mouse clicks Keystrokes (Caps Lock, Alt, Super, Control) Clear keys Voice activated commands Applications that you don't want to see what you type on your keyboard can be blocked from monitoring your keystrokes. Applications that you want to protect against could be monitored for all keystrokes or for keystrokes that match specific keywords. You could also control what applications are allowed to capture your keystrokes. You could have applications that you don't want to capture your keystrokes blocked. You could also have an application allowed to monitor your keystrokes but only allowed to capture specific keywords. Dela supports encrypted web sessions. Dela can connect to Dela.net from anywhere on the Internet. This protects you from application spyware that might be installed on your computer without your knowledge. You can even connect from your wireless network. Dela supports multiple protocols. The application can support any protocol, like webrtc or websocket, using the native web browser. The application can support multiple protocols in the same session. This is very useful if your computer is connected to more than one network. To connect to Dela.net, Dela uses web browser sessions. Dela opens a new session when you start the application. The application will close and disconnect from the Dela.net web service when you close 1d6a3396d6
