Please select a file type: cm3dtool zip. that was originally developed for the Raven Pro. Now, with a new console version, we have introduced an improved Motion Tracking component. The component can be used to track any user-defined object via markers that you designate. You can also use motion tracking to create masks, which can be used as video filters. The component itself is extremely easy to use, just add markers to your video, and turn on the motion tracking component. The component can be used as a video filter if you want to darken the parts of the video that are still. In the sequel to the first two parts of the demo diary, where we showed you how to create and use video masks in Assignabox plugins, you can learn how to do the same thing in the SDK. This second part of the demo diary presents two plugins: an Assignabox plugin, and a custom video filter plugin. We will show you how to use the same approach to create the same results. The first plugin, the Assignabox plugin, is used to define the video mask. The concept is similar to the use of video masks we saw in the first part of the diary. The Mask interface allows you to define the shape of the mask over the video.

Once the mask is defined, you can use the video mask component to define how the masked content will be shown over the video content. The second plugin, the video filter plugin, allows you to use the Motion 1cb139a0ed
