People came home the night before Christmas and they're all sleeping in their beds. What happens when they wake up early Christmas morning and wake their family up? Well, they leave the bed, run outside, and go get your presents, right? From the makers of The Sims comes a quirky collection of toys and games that come alive the second you press play. You wake up and discover everything is a little different in the morning. Some things work the way they normally do, but then some things work differently. You and your family will face both the happy and the crazy and the questions that come with all of it, from how did this just happen to why did Santa bother to bother to leave a gift for me at all? Each of the games in the game will provide you with simple puzzles, challenges and stressors with the end goal to find something you desire to play. Your energy will be getting drained at a normal pace, but if you take your time you will find yourself feeling like you have won. As you play more of the games, you will gain the power to change how the world plays out around you. Who you know will help you and you will help them in return. Everything you do will either help you, or hinder you, or be completely meaningless. As long as you don't die, you will be okay. Try to survive all the games and see what happens. FEATURES: Toxic Kitchen (The first game of the game will challenge you to get your life back before you are consumed by the ever-changing world around you. Become fully immersed in your own dream. Toxic Kitchen was designed to be played in a single sitting. You will play as a family, trying to keep everything you own from going up in smoke. Not only will you have to keep your family in line but you will also have to think about the best way to get you and your family out of this situation. There are multiple endings depending on how well you manage to keep the house from incinerating. Be careful, you don't want a garage fire. Whose Line Is It Anyway: A Card Game (c9d1549cdd

I don't understand why no one else seems to care about this game, and I am not going to care about it, either. There's something fun about commanding a monster on a beat-to-death pirate ship, which is a redneck, prison-yard version of the classic game "Battleship," but one that is legitimately fun. See, the stars of the show are Sam, a small mammal with that clichéd, yet broadly entertaining, mouse-like walk, and the titular giant, which in this case is the titular historic ship, which can be viewed as a sort of version of a beefy, 4-legged, big-ass sledgehammer. You play the ship as Sam, and the goal is to run around and blow stuff up with it, thus serving the titular, vintage nautical title. I don't know what is wrong with this, but I got hooked, and it is very, very fun. What makes this so much more fun than "Battleship" is that you are an adorable little rodent piloting a big, oafish, hulking hunk of wood, designed to ram things and knock them over. This doesn't take place in a purely depressing version of the past, but actually, in a pixelated 3-D world that is sort of reminiscent of space, except you can't move in any of the directions except left and right, with the wreckage of your ship still floating around and wobbling when you ram into it, and the level is always being rebuilt. If you want to be a very good mouse, and therefore a good pilot, you'll need to use the right weapon at the right time, and it's frustrating, but frustrating in an "accidental" sort of way, not in the way that makes you want to punch walls. It's a game that is fun without being annoying, and it's of a similar mood to the Deus Ex series, like the "Rebuilder" remake is. There's nothing like it. The only thing I don't like is that there's no save states on this, and no way to practice on the "easy" levels, so there's a good chance you'll blow through it without understanding how to play it, which is annoying, but not enough to make it not fun. Well worth a look. [#12, Rated: 8.0/10] ReviewsThe Elder Scrolls III: Morrowind Gameplay:

Hollywoodization: Originally, World War 2 Online was going to be a very American focus, with some to extensive CGI-rendered visual effects to get us into the mindset of the era. This was suggested by a student to include a historical mode, that you could toggle as needed to get a feel for that era of play. Another suggestion for the inclusion of historical play was the addition of the following elements: No Simulation Mode - Simply play the Random Order Mode (ROUND0) It's Just a Game - Simply play the TOP GAME mode (ROUND1) Use Team Jumping - Highest Rank Don't Deal With Friends Play - Don't invite your friends (once you disable friendplay, they can't play) Don't Do the Easy Missions - NOT easy! Narrative Modes: This is supposed to be an alternate narrative to the historical portions of the game. In order to be playable in simulation mode, you will need to follow the course outlined below: Embark Play ROUND0 Play a Multiplayer Match Play ROUND1 against various opponents End ROUND1, Logout, and Join the FAWN Party Return to Embark, Discard Your WEPs, and Join the PROD Game In ROUND0 there will be various missions to accomplish during your voyage. Each one has three difficulty levels that will depend on the number of players that are participating in the match. While you are in ROUND0 you will be given ranks that will help you pull off your assignments better, and can assign you roles in the match that will help you get the best performance.

A life adaptation to impair hearing impairment. Adults with major life limitation and asymmetric hearing impairment report poorer quality of life and greater difficulties with listening and communication than those without hearing problems. We sought to understand better this relationship by exploring the emotional and psychosocial consequences of lifetime hearing impairment from the perspectives of adults with hearing impairment and hearing aid users. Semi-structured interviews exploring personal and social perspectives on hearing impairment were performed in seven adults with hearing impairment and five hearing aid users. Data were analyzed using interpretive phenomenological analysis. All of the participants reported that their hearing impairment was a significant aspect of their life and had important implications for their ability to communicate with others. The major themes that emerged were social and emotional implications of hearing impairment, experiences with significant others, the implications of hearing impairment for the development of relationships, and coping with the disability. These themes showed potential implications for the development of interventions to help these adults manage hearing impairment. The importance of psychosocial issues in the life of individuals with disabling hearing impairment deserves further exploration.
