2018-11-06 Korea, Hong Kong, Singapore, Malaysia, Philippines, Thailand, Indonesia, Japan, Taiwan, India and ChinaMichigan's signature cable TV line, WOOD-TV, has channeled in a new primetime lineup geared to educate viewers about Islam. At 9 p.m. on the daily, WOOD's new "The Islamic Studies Hour" boasts 25 weekly segments on Muslim history, culture, and current issues. The segments, which debuted Monday, include "20,000 Years of Death" exploring the history of the Islamic religion, and a discussion on "Islam and the State." WOOD plans to add additional segments on topics including "LGBTQ Muslims," "Cyber Jihad," and the "History of the Taliban." "(The Islamic Studies Hour) will offer viewers unbiased and accurate information about Muslims and Islam, through segments that reflect the diversity of the Muslim community," said Mohammad Ahmed, Director of Public Affairs for Michigan Department of Civil Rights. While many mainstream media outlets are biased in their reporting on Muslims, WOOD says it is a non-profit public broadcasting outlet and will present an "even-handed and balanced examination of the entire spectrum of Islamic-related issues and content." According to WOOD, the show will be hosted by the "two-time Emmy Award-winning journalist," Sam Harris, whose work has appeared on CNN and the BBC. Harris is the author of "The End of Faith: Religion, Terror and the Future of Reason." The show joins a host of other recent anti-Muslim programs and programming changes, including Fox News' America Live, which aired a segment on how the Muslim Brotherhood is "trying to launch a revolution across the United States" in March. While the tone of the programs are often similar, it appears that Fox News' segments are geared toward inciting fear and hysteria among Americans. The Islamophobic shows have sparked public debate, but more than likely not the kind the people behind them wanted.
