"The 'HyperMotion Technology' engine used in FIFA 22 has become a key pillar for FIFA's moving to the future," said Peter Hentemann, Head of Pro Gaming at EA SPORTS. "Now we are using data from real-life players playing football and have been able to create an engine capable of handling the varied, complex and challenging movement that football entails. It all came together in FIFA 22." In addition to working on the new "HyperMotion Technology" engine, Pro League Manager of the Year Marco Rossi also served as Game Director for the game. As an added bonus, FIFA 22 features Official Team of the Week challenges every week, putting players into a unique situation where they must master one of the game's full-fledged game modes to earn the full team's respect. In turn, players can earn rewards such as exclusive commemorative jerseys, stick kits and other select items. Pro League Manager of the Year Rossi worked alongside the game's international Game Director Miro Alznar to bring FIFA 22 to life. "We are delighted to have Marco Rossi and Miro Alznar as our Game Director and Game Director on FIFA 22," added Hentemann.
