For example: I want to input: 2.3 4.5 6.7 And I want it printed out like this: 2.3 4.5 6.7 How would I do that? I am a beginner and I'm not really sure where to start. A: There are two options for you. First you can either keep storing the whole array in the variable, and then print them with a loop, or you can use Array.prototype.splice method. Example is - var nums = [2.3,4.5,6.7]; console.log(nums); nums.splice(0, 2); // Delete the 2nd element console.log(nums); The above example prints the same thing to the console - [2.3, 4.

The code looks like try { //do something } catch (Exception e) { printStacktrace(); } But if the stacktrace contains multiple lines, it will output them in one line. I am working on a VBA code, and I would like to prepend every single new line by ' '. I don't know how to do this, and I haven't been able to find a suitable example (already tried copy-pasting snippets I found, but only got them to replace all ' ' with '\r ', which I don't want). Any suggestions? A: A simpler approach would be to just use System.out.print(), System.out.println(), println() instead of printStacktrace() call, and then force System.out to print the new line manually: try { //do something } catch (Exception e) { System.out.print(" "); printStacktrace(); } Or, use PrintStream-based approach, if available: try { //do something } catch (Exception e) { new PrintStream(System.out, true, "UTF-8").println(" "); printStacktrace(); } Note: any approach should work as long as there is an exit before System.exit() call.
