I have one table 't1' #tmp id | name -------------- 1 | car 2 | cat 3 | bike 4 | dog Output should be #temp id | size ------------------ 1 | 2 2 | 1 3 | 3 4 | 2 5 | 2 6 | 2 7 | 3 8 | 2 A: ;WITH cte(id, size) AS (SELECT id, 1 UNION ALL SELECT id, 1 + size FROM cte WHERE size Polyamine Biosynthesis, Progression, and Regression in the Phaeophyceae Chlamydomonas. Polyamines putrescine (Put) and spermidine (Spd) are ubiquitous aliphatic polycations required for a number of important biological processes in eukaryotic cells. Polyamine catabolic enzymes polyamine oxidase and diamine oxidase, which degrade their product into the corresponding aldehyde, function as growth inhibitors under nutrient limiting conditions and, therefore, are important for survival of organisms in their natural environment. However, polyamines are also involved in regulation of gene expression, protein synthesis, and autophagy, which underlies stress response to abiotic stimuli and to several pathogenic microorganisms. Thus, polyamines play a major role in cell homeostasis and many biological processes. In diatoms, polyamines have been previously shown to act as regulators of cell division cycle and stress response. We used polyamine analogs such as 3,3'-diindolylmethane (DIM) to induce specific biosynthetic
