I need to consume it with my silverlight application. I don't use any tool. But I need to declare it as [System.CodeDom.Compiler.GeneratedCodeAttribute("System.ServiceModel", "3.0.0.0")] [System.ServiceModel.ServiceContractAttribute(Namespace="")] public interface IMyWebService { [System.ServiceModel.OperationContractAttribute(Action="", ReplyAction="")] string GetData(); [System.ServiceModel.OperationContractAttribute(Action="", ReplyAction="")] string MyWebService(); } Can someone please help me how to do this? I think using System.ServiceModel; and adding service reference is not the right way for me. Does someone know the right way to do this? A: In the same way you would consume any WCF service with a normal library. So, assuming your DLL is called myLib.dll you would add a reference to it. Then create a new proxy class in your silverlight app. Then use it. I think the Microsoft.Practices.ServiceLocation package has a lot of classes that you should look at. Basically, it is the code you have in your question, but with one little tweak... [System.ServiceModel.OperationContract
