Here is also a new release of DXWnd 0.1.08, that supports the Alien Shooter game. Version 0.1.08 is a small patch that silently stores in a configuration file an information whether the game will use the D3D8 functions or not. DXWnd on steam (or any other similar service) detects automatically this configuration file and will display the game window properly. Also, the D3D9:Reset() wrapper has some additional support for DirectX 9. You can use the new configuration variable LITTLEEXE to check whether the game was made to use D3D8 functions or not. Then the wrapper selects the right version of dxwnd.dll based on the configuration.

Alien Shooter The Experiment Full Version

Alien Shooter is a third-person shooting game series developed by Sigma Team from Russia, first released in 2003. This game uses the 45-degree viewshooting mode that is rarely used in games made for PC platform. Each work continues a dark, terrifying and bloody picture style in both graphics and environmental sound aspects, which makes the player feel depressing in the whole process of gaming.
