Twenty (20) Swiss Albino mice were divided in two groups of 10 mice in each, Group I and Group II. Each group was comprised of healthy and clinically normal animals to serve as untreated control while the other group was used as control group. The mice in Group I were administered (14) of homoeopathic drugs namely Gelsemiumus, Lycopodium and Staphysagriawith oral feeding at graded and constant dilution of 10:1, 20:1, 30:1, 40:1, 50:1, 60:1, 70:1 materia medica as and when required and monitored for 24 h. The mice in Group II served as control for Group I and were administered identically the other drugs but without materia medica (14). After drug administration, the mice were kept individually in cages and observed for any adverse effects, symptoms etc. After 24-h observation period, it was noted that mice in Group I group did not show any adverse symptoms and no adverse reactions after drug treatment but the mice in the control group showed various symptoms and were found dead at 24 h showing failure of drug treatment in this group of mice. All these experiments were performed under the guidance of a registered pharmacist and homoeopathic physician Dr. O.P. Bapu who was engaged as consultant for this study at the inception and who was also a bona fide pharmacist and did biostatistics, data analysis and interpretation under the guidance of the Principal Investigator. All experiments were performed according to the guidelines of International Homeopathic Pharmacopoeia and the recommendations of the Institutional Animal Ethics Committee and were approved before commencement of the study.
