Coding standards example I have been reading about the coding standards for joomla and seen that people recommended following a naming convention for variables and functions. However I don't really know how to implement such a system. The question is : How to choose a naming convention? A: IMHO, you can start with the following: Names must be lowercase. Prefixes may be used only to designate the relationship between a field and a related function in the database (e.g. std, pref, return, etc). Here a list of common prefixes can be found in the following page: http://docs.joomla.org/Forum/HTML/CSS/Coding_Standards#Variable_and_function_naming_convention A: First of all, I'd say that the standard functions to follow are PHP standard ones. In that case, start with PHP's coding standards (<http://www.php.net/manual/en/coding.constants.php>). Then, get some books on the best practices and point to them. For example, if you want to find a book on PHP best practices, there are some on google (or just search for them). For example, there is "The Ultimate PHP Design Guide" book (<http://www.amazon.com/The-Ultimate-Design-Guide-PHP-Object-Oriented/dp/0596103828>). I'd say that's the only book on PHP best practices, so I can't tell you more than that. Usefulness of the L'Episcopo score in predicting primary outcome of patients undergoing transcatheter aortic valve implantation. More than 5 years after the initial study of the L'Episcopo score (LES), clinical trials are still lacking to establish its validity and define patient population eligible for TAVI. We evaluated the LES in predicting procedural and in-hospital outcomes of patients undergoing TAVI by real-time 3D TEE imaging. We retrospectively evaluated 142 consecutive patients (94% symptomatic) who underwent TAVI at our Institution. Computed tomography angiography (CTA), transthoracic echocardiography (TTE) and real-time 3D TEE were performed in each patient. LES was calculated from the sum of the following six variables: age, creatinine clearance, left ventricular end-diastolic diameter, aortic annulus diameter, left atrial volume and abnormal left ventricular wall thickness. Pre-procedural aortic root mean square values were calculated by the formula: $8 \times (\text{left ventricular end-diastolic area} / \text{body surface area})$ and compared with follow-up values. Functional and echocardiographic outcomes were evaluated 1-month and 1-year after the procedure. Mean LES was 72.2 ± 11 .
